At the time these lines are written the trojan coach has made no statement but everybody else has, asid it seems apparent that, regardiles of the rumor regarding Knute Rockne, the one about Slip Madigan and the various other imaginative efferings of the press, Henderson, is beginning to really get amoyed. If you had been fired as frequently by the papers as Henderson has, you'd get amoyed, to.

Without any announcement of the or that it e statement from Gwynn Wilson that Honderson had not tendered his resignation up to noon yearerday, it len't good policy to go on the theory that Gus has quit, although by the time these words see the light of day he probably will have gotten some kind of a catement off his manly chest. But Gus certainly has a right to be sore at the stuff that has been printed by some of his suppeased friends.

No coach likes to wake up about half a doesn times a read read in the paper that he either has been fired. Particularly, it is amoying when his university doesn't come right out and take some stand, that refutes these statements which are invariably credited either to "some one high in authority" or else to some influential alumnus.

Our own personal guess is that Gus is being treated rather shabilly. He came to U.S.C. several years ago, and immediately lifted the institution out of the doormat class which it had occupied during the years immediately preceding. During his tenure of office he hasn't turned out one poor team. He has invariably figured up among the top two or three on the Coast. Unless we're mistaken, his record would match up rather favor-

POWERS AFTER BENGALS

Former Owner of Los Angeles Club Announces He is Out to Purchase V-ernon Franchise

the Pacific Coast League concluded its two days senson at the Bilimore yesterday, with the most surprising thing to take place being the announcement from John F. Powers, from whom William Wrigley, Jr., purchased the Lee Angeles franchise, that he was in the field for the Vernose club. Powers stated that he had heavy financial backing and that he was prepared to offer Ed R. Maier, $178,000 cash for the Bengala.

Just how this will set with Wrigley has not yet been determined, but evidently Powers has come to some kind of agreement with the Angel boss or he would not be making statements that he intended to make Maier an offer.

If Powers purchasses the Vernon club, then it would seem that the plans of Wrigley and Bill Lana, made last summer, for the transfering of Lang's Balf-Lake club to Long Beach and have it play at the new Angel park, have been disposed of. Lane would then have to keep his Bee franchise at the Morman. City, where he has lost money in baseball for a number of wans. All other club have lost money in the long trips to Sait Lake and would like to get rid of this bugaboo.

record as favoring that change. Among the fraternity of coaches it is hardy ethical to make such changes without the approval of both parties vitally concerned, and this is especially true in this case in view of fact that the two men are such warm friends.

What will happen if U.S.C. doesn't get Rockrie is hard to imagine. It would seem that having gone this far the alumni must feel pretty sure of their ground. It is said that Rockne's contract at Notre Dame runs until 1925. Henderson's has two more years to go here. Reports to the afternoon papers to the effect that he would be paid his two years' salary whether he stayed or not were denied by Henderson. "There has been no official conference of any kind and naturally there has been mention of money."

Should Rockne decide to stay at Notre Dame, U.S.C. officials might find themselves in a peculiar position. Rockne and Tom The-ye, two of the best known figures in football, have ranked Henderson sixth and seventh respectively among the coaches of the country. It's unlikely that Andy Smith, Pop Warner, Tad Jones, or Beb Zuppke, who rank ahead of Henderson would consider coming to U.S.C. It would then be up to local officials to secure a man less known than Henderson and there probably would be quite a holler at this turn of affairs.

If Henderson is really to go—and nobody knows whether he will or not as there has been no official action as yst—a word of commendation for his fine record while at U.S.C. is certainly in good tast at this time. If he is to stay on it won't do any harm, either. In 1912 "Gloomy" came to the local institution from Broadway High School, Seattle. At that time U.S.C. was a comparatively small school and was not a member of the Pacific Coast Conference. The Trojans lost one game in 1919, to California, 14 to 13. The next year they were undefeated. In 1921 the Bears won again and also in the following year. Two defeats were sustained in 1920, one at the hands of the Bears and the other from Washington. OBSERVATIONS BY BILL HENRY

Mr. Rockne, who usually loses a game or so every season. Henderson's chief difficulty seems to have been an inability to live up to the expectations of the enthusiastic alumni of U.S.C. His teams have not been able to wallop California, and that seems to be the one thing that they want him to do. The fact that he licks just about everybody else seems to be folgotten.

Henderson unquestionably

Henderson unquestionably has had wonderful material. U.S.C. is loaded to the guards with star athletes from all the high schools in the State, and from every place else in the country. With this material he has been expected to clean up on California, and he hasn't done it. He has come very close on mearly overy occasion, but that doesn't seem to be satisfactory.

While Henderson undoubted by has had wonderful material occasion, but that doesn't seem to be estiffactory.

While Henderson undoubtedly has had wonderful material there is no reason to doubt that he has encountered a lot of obstacles along with the good material. The Trojan fraternities and alumni, according to common gossip, have insisted in having their finger in the pie, and Gas has been sitting over a smoldering volcane which burst into instant finms overy time he lost a game.

It has been rather strongly intimated that Gus is one of the people that Stanford and California have been angry with and that possibly Gus might be offered as a sacrifice to achieve peace. However, those who ought to know at the northern schools have stated several times that Gus hasm't anything to do with the trouble except in a very indirect way. Anyhow, Gus is finding out that fat aslaries usually carry their troubles with them.

PASADENA AND VENICE

Water polo teams of the Venic High School and the Pasade letic Club will tangle in the Venice Plunge Friday evening in their second meeting. The last melee second meeting. The last meles between these squads resulted in a 3-to-2 victory for the Crown City seven, which managed to slip across a goal one minute before the final whistle.

Both teams are evenly matched, and Venice polo fans look forward to a thrilling encounter. The Passadenans will be accompanied by Coach Allen and a goodly crowd of rooters. The Canal City squad enthusiasts always turn out well for tank exhibitions.

95c Price Should Start Men's Athletic Underwear Buying Today at Bullock's

January at Bullock's heralds a California Springtime with this offering, calculated to give early impetus to buying through savings of a notable kind.

Here are 1200 suits made of what is known as "88x88" Count Nainsook (a good underwear fabric.)

The garments are amply cut with an inset of elastic webbing at waist across the back.

The button holes are cut horizontally (a fact which means everything in assuring that the garment will remain buttoned under ordinary strain).

All seams taped, crotch joinings, and all points of strain reinforced—one could go on at length—but it must be evident that here is an opportunity of unusual merit—at 95c a garment. Today.

Julian, aged 11. Both were drowned in Quinebaug River while skating. The accident occurred near the stone arch bridge on River street.

Julian, the younger boy, skated onto thin ice near the bridge, breke through and sank. His cry hrought Galipsau to his assistance. He ran for a life preserver hung on a near-by building, but both victims out thought of his own safety, Galipeau tried to reach firm ices, but the swift current swept both under. Just to the want of Lyan county in Terry county, which the government report shows had ginned 12,714 bales up to December 20, with more to come in. The total production of Terry county in 1922 was only 5509 bales. Some Cotton was grown in Teakum and Gaines counties the last season but it was formerly the belief of old-time cotton growers of the "black-waxy" but of Central Terns that the sandy soil of Terry, Dawson, Toakum and Gaines counties was not adapted to growing cotton. This theory has been upset so conclusively that an execus of experienced cotton produces from the older parts of Teams is taking place with this group of counties as their objective point for future farming operations.

Gara county, with most of the cotton-growing area situated above the "caprock" produced 18,565 bales the last season, as compared with 7007 bales the preceding year. This county adjoins Lyan-county on the east. WATERLOO (Iowa.) Jan. 13—Nick Maharres has forgiven his wife.

He will do all he can to save her from the gallows, although she has confessed that she lured his 5-year-old boy, her stepson to the river and pushed the lad in, watching him drown.

She will plead insunity, when her trial comes on.

In the meantime her husband's attitude has changed. After the tragedy he denied her, scorned her appeals, turned from her when the officers arrested her and refused to go near her in the jail.

But he has undergone a change of heart toward the woman, whose helpless and pittable mental condition has moved him to compassion and forgiveness.

He has visited her in jail dairy and has arranged to help her attorneys in her defense.

W. A. Cook, County Attorney, has stated definitely that he will ask for trial within a short time, but he has not stated whether he will linsist on the death penalty. The woman's statement after her arrest that she drowned the boy because she hated him, was modified by a subsequent statement that she had not thought of it ill an instant before it happened and it followed a long period during which she felt funny, and had expressed a desire to be put in jail.

Predate after January 1st, 1930, at a broker at the most profitable business for a broker, but it is certainly one of a broker, but it is certainly one of the cleanest and most pleasant. The daily contact with satisfied customers from whom there is nothing to conceal, who know exactly what you are making on each transaction, is to my mind a business not to be compared with the unlisted business with its concealed profits and its accompanying griefs.

"As the result of long drawn out negotiations, and thanks to the determined co-operation of the Western Union Telegraph Company, an upclaimed and set in motion July 14, the first in the West.

"As long as there is such a wide disparity between the New York and Los Angeles interest rate on call or short-time money, we are helpless. We cannot expect to hold margin accounts 13 securities listed on both the New York and Los Angeles stock exchanges unless chesper money can be obtained in Los Angeles.

TIAN SUGGESTED

To overcome this handloap it has been suggested that a committee be appointed from the members of this exchange to arrange for a conference with a similar committee to be appointed from the officials of the clearing house banks in view of devising Jome plan whereby call or short-time money can be borrowed locally on listed securities on more liberal terms and at a rate of interest more commensurate with the New York, or even the San Francisco rate of interest, If this can be brought about it would tend to keep at home a sum of money vast in the aggregate that is now being steadily poured into New York from Los Angelea.

"You hear much these days about patronising home stock exchange—the mediume of prompt settlements and deliveries—and why? Frankly, because too few of us are not whole-heartedly backing our own stock exchange. Some are paying too much attention to suitsited liesues; others are paying too much attention to settles listed solely in souse; others are paying too much attention to stocks listed solely in New York. Those who are dealing in unlisted issues should unselfishly use their influence to have the desirable ones they hadle listed on this exchange. And those cotton yields were not satisfactory owing to a combination of causes, and prices, while fair, were below expectations. An interesting devel-opment of the season was the in-creased price for Fina long staple cotton, formerly the predominating variety, which will result in a ma-terial increase in Fima acreage in the Balt River Valley next year, only $000 acres having been grown this season."

NEW YORK. Jan. 13.—Today's markets fully bore out the axiom that prices do not advance perpendicularly, even when conditions are of constructive tendency, but rather, they progress by easy ing forward briskly and securities were destinguished by a large volume of transactions, the foreign as a whole made no progress and come drastic declines took place. It could not be said, of course, that a stale-stone in financial history. It could not be said, of course, that a stale-markets. Rather, the day's fluctuation, although very violent, represented merely the endeavor to reach an equilibrium.

This was practically reflected on The market had in its favor a is reformed.

day of moderately constructive news, a continuance of easy money, some "straws in the wind" of industry, which may be interpreted as reflecting continued expansion of industry, and finally a speculative public which is firmly committed to the expectation of advancing prices. Profit taking in considerable proportions was evident today, not only on the stock exchange, but in the sterling market as well, and the pound decilined rather sharply, not in response to any adverse news, but rather from the pressure of sales that speculators suffered with their profits. Possibly if any criticism could be made of all markets at this time, and this includes stocks, bonds, the commodities and the exchanges, it would be that they are too professional; that it, some, at least, of their strength has been derived from buying in the expectations that deals could be made at a higher price, assuring a profit.

Mrs. Church filed her original suit on September 15, 1923, naming as ec-respondent Gladys MacDougall, said to have married since. She charged her husband with cruelty and infidelity. Last autumn Mrs. Church filed an amended complaint, involving Mabel Normand. The complaint asserted that Church told his wife that when he and the film actress were patients at Good Samaritan Hospital in July and August, 1923, Miss Normand came to his room and brought him drinks and threatened to tell naughty stories. She also kissed him good-bys when he left the hospital, Mrs. Church declared her husband told her.

Miss Normand yesterday issued the following statement through her attorneys, Fredericks and Hanna.

"I have made a determined effort to have the charges of Mrs. Church has consistently opposed this. The Church divorce case, at which I would have been represented by counsel, was to have been tried in a few days. Facing that trial, Mrs. Church has withdrawn her charges. I consider her action.

65 Beautifully Dyed White Foxes, Underpriced, $65.00!

In the Season's Smartest Shades Including

Cocoa Beige Platinum Steel Blue Dyed Blue Also White and Natural Cherry Red

An event in Foxes that should prove especially interesting to smart women because of their remarkable value—because of their quality-and because of their acceptability for spring and summer.

Foxes selected from Bullock's Section of fine furs and drastically reduced from their former prices. Each skin has passed the rigid test to which all furs are put before given a Bullock presentation. They are faultlessly mounted with head, tail and paws.

Because of the very low price for Wednesday, the number is limited to 65 skins—$65.00 each.

A Value Scoop for Wednesday at Bullock's

The new Poke that a famous motion picture star has brought into popularity. A shape that is in great demand at a much higher price. But Bullock's conceived the idea of getting these clever new pokes and offering them at this strikingly low price to form a valueful means for women to become acquainted with Bullock's New Millinery Section, Third Floor, Hill Street Building.

While they are all in the desired poke shape, these hats are quite different from one another because of the variety of straws, straw braids and hair braids used.

And they are trimmed so differently. Some with soft swirls of chiffon. Some with severe little tailored bows. Others with novel ornaments and ribbons used in an unusual manner. The colors, too, accentuate their diversity. The brilliant shades of rose, red, orange and green. The soft pastel tints to harmonize with new pastel coats or ensembles. The smart blonde shades and conservative darker tones.

But it really seems impossible to impress one with the value significance of this Event at Bullock's Hill Street Millinery Section.

When the voters last May, by an overwhelming majority, marked their ballots "Yes" on the Major Traffic Street. Plan they showed once more that the citizens of Los Angeles are thoroughly awake to the necessity of through, widened streets. If the people can prevent it, there is to be no repetition here of the experience of Philadelphia, where it was necessary literally to dynamite buildings in the central part of the city to provide through traffic arteries. Philadelphia delayed and delayed until finally it was necessary to spend millions of dollars to provide traffic congestion relief that could have been secured a few years before by the expenditure of one-tenth of the sum now necessary.

relief that could have been secured a few years before by the expenditure of one-tenth of the sum now necessary.

The carrying out of the Major Traffic Street Plan is already under way. A favorable decision is expected soon from the courts upholding the city's right to grant the majority property owners' request to open and widen Tenth street from the east to the west city boundaries. The Council has adopted the ordinance for the opening and extending of Broadway from Pico street to the south and is expected this month to deny protests and order the widening of Olive street from Seventh street to Pico street as part of the general pian of widening this street throughout its length.

An agreement has just been reached between interested property owners that will mean their unqualified support for the creation of a new east and west 150-foot traffic artery from Hoover street to Maple avenue, located between Washington street and Pico street and to be known as Washington the mean their unqualified support for the creation Midway. On the route now agreed upon it meets the approval of the Pianning Commission and the Traffic Commission, both of which have worked unceasingly for widened streets.

SOCIETY

BY JUANA NEAL LEVY The Bachelors, which every year is the much-looked-forward-to and the one great event in the social world, are being completed and the-affair at the Biltmore, February 20, promises to be a wonderful success. As is the usual custom, the patronesses, the matrons who are chosen by a unanimous vote of the gallants, are those whom they, wish to honor with the courtesy each year. under the stipulation that Feeney adopt Donald Keith as his screen name.

Since Feeney, or rather Keith, as he will be henceferth known, has an excellent reputation as a juvenile, Mr. Schulberg does not claim to have discovered him, but rather to have recognized his ability and to have taken advantage of an opportunity to get the services of a youth he believes eventually will become one of the screen's leading stars.

"There has been much talk about the lack of star material in motion plotures," said Mr. Schulberg. There is really no shortage. There is more talent of the star variety gravitating around the studios than ever before. It is up to producers to see this talent and use it."

In "The Boomerang." which Schulberg now has in production, with Anita Stewart and Bert Lytell in the leading roles, Feeney for the first time, will be presented as Donald Keith. He first worked for Schulberg in "Free to Love," in which he played opposite Clara Bow, His work in that production pleased the producer so that he engaged him for "The Boomerang."

After watching his work in that production for a week, he signed him to the five-year contract.

Bess Meredyth has written the adaptation and scenario for "Nothing to Wear." She has been working on this since her return from the "Ben Hur" company in Rome. Director Henley lately returned from a flying trip to New York, where he and Harry Rapf consulted with Shipman concerning the treatment of the story. The author told Henley that he was contemplating making a play from the story and picture, which reverses the usual custom.

The cast has not been selected as yet, but Mr. Rapf and Mr. Henley have a number of prominent players under consideration for the leading roles. Production will commence in ten days or two weeks.

The 'etter was written in longhand, and was mailed in an envelope on which the return address was given as 131 South Pacific Boulevard, Huntington Park.

EVERY MOTORIST

made this pledge and

Safety Pledge

It represents this big organization's whole-hearted campaign to back Chief Heath in his war against fast, care-less driving.

Every driver of a YELLOW or BROWN & WHITE Cab has signed it—realizes its full significance—is intent on carrying it out in spirit and letter.

Think of over 500 of the city's best drivers—sworn to obey traffic regulations, and reduce the daily toll of accidents! Their pledge is one every car owner and driver can profitably take—that every citizen should fully support.

You can help these men keep their pledge. By reporting chance violations of one driver you not only protect his fellows but safeguard the public as well.

Remember that careful driving always makes best time, and be content that your driver stays within the set limit. Co-operate for safety, just as you have helped lower rates and improve the standard of service in the past!

OLLEEN MOORE has made the longest step forward of any actor or actress of the year that has just died.

"So Big" was more than a good picture. It was more, even, than one of the best acted, best directed pictures ever shown on the

It is the beginning of a motion-picture revolution.

Colleen's Courage

It is almost the first motion picture in my recollection in which a young and pretty actress has gone through from the first to the last of it as a drab, bleak, unlovely figure.

Even in the first scenes of the story Colleen disguised berself with funny-looking clothes of a past generation.

of a past generation. All through the picture I was expecting to see some kind of a ture I was expecting to see some kind of a scene cut in with Colleen dressed up in a million dollars' worth of clothes and furs. I had made up my mind that she would be unable to resist showing herself in some kind of a day dream in which she appeared the way she would like to look; anything to get over a scene in which she looked beautiful and stylish.

For the Story's Sake

But Colleen was brave enough and wise enough to play the story instead of playing Colleen.

If other actresses follow her example it will mean the dawning of a new day in pictures.

"The Snob"

The only other instance I know of in which an actor had the brains and good sense to tell the story for its own value was when Jack Gilbert appeared as The Snob in the picture of that name.

Directors With Brains

Directors With Brains

In each case these stars had the co-operation of directors of real brains.

In my opinion, there are no directors now behind the megaphone with more promise of big things than Charles Brabin, who directed "So Big," and Monta Bell, who directed "The Snob."

I wonder how much of their promise has to do with this fact: That of all the directors I know, they have the least personal vanity. They are content to pilot the ship without trying to pose out on the bow as the gilt figurehead.

Betty and Maude Adams

Bitter and crushing remarks greet the hapless critic who offers to compare the two Peter Pans—Maude Adams and Betty Bronson.

Yet comparison is inevitable. You might as well erect another Statue of Liberty; and not have the two

How They Contrasted

How They Contrasted

There is this to be said:
Out of the finesse and art of her long experience,
Maude Adams put more thrill and drama into Barrie's charming, whimsical fantasy.
There was a real and poignant suspense in her appeal to the audience to please say they believed in fairies.
And, at the end, where Peter was left alone in the tree tops, Miss Adams left you in tears—tears of a wistfulness that you couldn't explain to yourself.
The truth is, she fairly broke your heart with Peter Pan; she left you piteous over your own fate in hav-

Pan; she left you piteous over your own fate in having to grow up and leave golden youth behind.

The Glory of Youth

In many other ways, however, little Betty Bronson of something that Maude Adams didn't have.

She had a sweet, bubbling, exuberant youth — a luscious Maytime that all the ar in the world can never bring back.

Herbert Brenon

Herbert Brenon

Mr. Herbert Brenon, the director, made the most of the physical opportunities that the screen offered him. Much of the delightful charm of the picture is due to effects like the pirate ship that floats off into the air—effects impossible to the stage.

The director's charming imagination and delicacy of touch showed nowhere to such advantage as in his treatment of the fairy, Tinker Bell. This little will-o'-the-wisp light that kept changing into a tiny fairy figure was one of the loveliest and most delightful effects ever seen on the screen

A Suggestion

If a suggestion could be made without impertinence, I think the dramatic climax where Peter Pan appeals to the audience to save Tinker suffers in the cutting. Peter Pan is allowed to dilly-dally too long before she finds that Tinker Bell has taken poison before she appeals to the audience. Also, her appeal would have been more effective if her young pleading figure had been taken against black velvet, where you couldn't see the background; you keep looking past her at the little house of Tinker Bell instead of giving her your complete attention. omplete attenti

Which Was Right?

Which Was Right?

There was one scene which Betty Bronson and Maude Adams played in exactly opposite ways. Whichever one was right, they had precisely opposite ideas of the dramatic values of the situation.

This was Peter Pan's battle with Capt. Hook, the bold, bad pirate.

Miss Bronson played it as a desperate affray with cutlasses that flashed and clashed in real ferocity. Miss Adams played it with mockery. Right in the middle of the battle she always turned to the audience and shrugged her shoulders as though Capt. Hook were really too easily vanquished to be interesting.

Betty's Future

The odd part of Miss Bronson's really glowing success in this part is the fact that it gives no clue to her

There is nothing in her work that shows she has or the hasn't a real future as an actress.

She will go into her next picture almost an unknown quantity as far as proven dramatic ability is concerned. She might easily be a one-part star who never could do it again; or she might draw on a dramatic ability of untold power. There was nothing in "Peter Pan" that shows either one way or another.

The theme of that story had almost unmeasured dramatic possibilities.

It was, in brief, the story of a Eurasian girl, the daughter of an Englishman of fine family and a low-caste Chinese woman. Returning from a European finishing school, she arrives just after the death of her father to find herself drifting around in a sort of perilous twilight social zone between the Chinese people and the white society. "A. Thief in Paradise" is the prize hokum picture of the year. Audiences may take it seriously if they like, but they will do so at their peril. It makes a mock of actuality, but it does this so gitteringly and entertainingly, and withal so agreeably until the last two or three hundred feet, that it is bound to attract a great deal of popular interest, even if it does make the more discriminating people leave the theater in an irritable frame of mind.

is very nearly a tragedy, but it cannot be described as lacking in a diversified interest.

The plot germinates somewhere in the South Seas. The characters introduced are outeasts. Principally, there is Blake, portrayed by Ronald Colman, and Carmina, acted by Alleen Pringle. There is also another chap with whom Carmina is in love—scion of a prominent family living near San Francisco.

Blake desires to break loose from his surroundings and return to civilization.

Claude Gillingwater and Alee B. Frank (right) have important character roles.

He thinks he has discovered the mean to secure his freedom in a valuable pearl, but Carmina's lover tries to wrest this from him. In the insent the two men go overboard, and Bakr's siversary is killed in an encounter with a shark.

Meanwhile Carmina has opened a letter from her lover's father that dot tains money to bring him home. The lover dead, she induces Blake to many cure and as the son, and reluctantly he accepts this way out.

When they arrive in San Francisco Blake has agreed to share the process of the adventure with Carmina, but he goes to the house of her former lover's father alone. He is accepted, too, as the real son, although he is horsewhipped by the irate parent in the bargain.
